DISCUSSION: The City of Malibu has recently joined the Independent Cities Association (ICA), a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization representing nearly 40 independent cities throughout Southern California. ICA's mission is to empower independent elected officials through education, policy insight, and leadership development, while fostering collaboration on regional issues such as public safety, infrastructure, economic development, education, and intergovernmental relations.

As a member City, Malibu may appoint a City Councilmember to serve on the ICA Board of Directors; however, the appointment is optional. The Board provides leadership for the organization and represents the interests of its member cities. ICA also hosts two educational seminars annually and conducts in-person Board meetings several times throughout the year.

Staff recommends that the City Council appoint one City Councilmember to serve as the City's representative on the ICA Board of Directors.
